Toronto's skyline changing

► Big construction projects continue in 2011 ► Wasted spaces become parks, new skyscrapers coming up

Toronto will be a construction zone next year as work continues on some of the city's most defining projects — Don River Park in the West Don Lands, the Queens Quay reconfiguration, the revitalization of Fort York and Nathan Phillips Square and highrises such as the Aurora and L-Tower — but few will be complete by the end of the year. Here's a look at what will change in and around the city by the end of 2011:

Reclaimed spaces

In the spring, the north portion of Sherbourne Common, the city's new park on former industrial land at Queens Quay and Sherbourne, will open to include a children's play area. At the end of the year, Underpass Park, below the eastern portion of the Richmond Street overpass, will see derelict land transformed into ball hockey and basketball courts, as well as seating.

Landmark towers

The 59-storey Trump Hotel and Tower at Bay and Adelaide streets will become Toronto's second-highest building when it's finished.

Transit

The Yonge-University subway line will get a new look this year with the delivery of a completely redesigned train that's distinguished from the existing T1 cars by the fact that riders will be able to walk the full length of the train inside.

Woman dies hours after hit and run

A woman died in hospital early yesterday morning after being struck by two vehicles at Steeles Avenue E. and Silver Star Boulevard on Tuesday evening.

The victim was crossing Steeles when she was struck by a van. A second vehicle travelling northbound on Silver Star Boulevard struck the woman again as she lay on the ground at about 5:30 p.m. The driver of the van remained at the scene but the second vehicle drove off. A friend of the victim quickly arrived at the scene to be by her friend's side, said Toronto police Staff Sgt. Tim Ralph.

The victim, a 30-year-old woman, was taken to hospital but succumbed to her injuries at about 4:15 a.m.

The second vehicle is believed to be a light-coloured Toyota Corolla, said Ralph. Ralph said police are still looking for witnesses as they determine whether charges will be laid against the first driver.

"The matter is still under investigation," he said.

He didn't release what type of injuries the woman sustained.

The area was closed off for much of Tuesday evening as police investigated but had reopened by yesterday morning.

Thaw to make for a soggy New Year's

DARREN CALABRESE/THE CANADIAN PRESS

► Spring-like weather forecast for Toronto this weekend

Planning a romantic New Year's Eve cuddled by a flickering fire? Better opt for the DVD version.

The forecast for tomorrow night is a rather May-like 9 C.

"Fine," you say, "we'll embrace the warmth outside, hand-in-hand, as fireworks kiss the moonlit sky."

Adorable. But it's going to rain, so good luck with that.

Don't blame us. If you're looking for the messenger, his name is Dave Phillips.

"It's going to be raining and it's going to be wet," said the Environment Canada climatologist, likening Toronto's weather to a yo-yo.

On New Year's Day, the high will be 8 C, which is about 10 degrees above average for this time of year.

"It will be melting above you and below you. A lot of splashing of pedestrians and revellers."

CLIMATOLOGIST DAVE PHILLIPS

"It could be that Toronto will be the warmest place in Canada this New Year's," Phillips said. However, the city's record high for a New Year's Day — 9.2 C in 2007 — is likely to remain unchallenged.

And don't get too comfortable. On Sunday, the temperature will drop back down to a high of 4 C.

A flash freeze will replace the slush, setting a slippery precedent for the unpredictable wintry days that lie ahead.

Mentally ill need more community help: Panel

Police, the courts and hospital emergency rooms spend too much time dealing with people with mental health issues who aren't getting needed supports in the community, concludes an expert panel set up by the Ontario government.

"This heavy investment in hospital-based services has not resulted in a measurable improvement in mental health. Instead, we see the need for services growing," concludes the group's report.

"If we can get the health investment right, we can reduce many of the social costs associated with mental illnesses and addictions."

Terrorist plot in Denmark thwarted

► The group was planning to enter a newspaper office and kill as many as possible, Danish intelligence says

Police in Denmark and Sweden halted an imminent terrorist attack yesterday by arresting five men who planned to shoot as many people as possible in a building housing the newsroom of a paper that published cartoons of the Prophet Muhammad, officials said.

Denmark's intelligence service said that after months of surveillance it arrested four men in two raids in the suburbs of the capital, Copenhagen, and seized a submachine gun, a silencer and ammunition. Swedish police said they arrested a 37-year-old Swedish citizen of Tunisian origin living in Stockholm. "An imminent terror attack has been foiled," said Jakob Scharf, head of the Danish Security and Intelligence Service, or PET.

PET said it seized a 44-year-old Tunisian, a 29-year-old Lebanese-born man and

Prior plots

There have been at least four plots to attack Jyllands-Posten or Kurt Westergaard, the artist who drew the most contentious of 12 cartoons, which were published by the newspaper in 2005.

Twisting the truth earns man bragging rights

A Wisconsin man has earned bragging rights as the champion liar of 2010 with this line: "I almost had a psychic girlfriend but she left me before we met."

David Milz, 49, told The Associated Press he came up with the one-liner over the summer when he was joking around with colleagues. He thought it might be good enough to win the Burlington Liars Club's annual contest, but

"I almost had a psychic girlfriend but she left me before we met."

DAVID MILZ, CHAMPION LIAR OF 2010

the call he received yesterday was still a surprise.

"I was just shocked when I heard I won," the Bristol man said. "Hey, it's a resume builder."

The liars' club started in 1929 as a lighthearted way to honour the creativity and humour of good exaggeration. A lifetime membership costs $1, but anyone can submit fibs for free.

About 500 entries came in this year from around the United States, with most from the Midwest, club vice-president Ed Impens said. He and two other judges sifted through the entries this week and each made a Top10 list.

Milz's entry was the only one that made all three lists, Impens said.

"It had all three of the things we think are important: It's fairly short, humour is very important, and it's timely," he said.

The liars' club is based in Burlington, a town of about 15,000, about 55 kilometres southwest of Milwaukee. It has almost 2,500 members around the world, president Joel Weiss said.

Milz is the superintendent of an elementary and middle school district in southeastern Wisconsin. He said he wasn't worried that his lying might encourage students to stretch the truth themselves.

"I'm going to work it the other way — 'You can't pull wool over the eyes of a champion liar,'" he joked.

BP pulls back from brink after oil spill disaster

- ▶ Driller has moved aggressively to shore up finances
- ▶ Dividend suspended, assets sales raise $21 billion

As the Gulf oil spill gushed out of control, BP's financial liabilities seemed big enough to sink the company. No more.

Cleanup, government fines, lawsuits, legal fees and damage claims will likely exceed the $40 billion US that BP has publicly estimated, according to an Associated Press analysis. But they will be far less than the highest estimates made over the summer by legal experts and prominent Wall Street banks, such as Goldman Sachs, which said costs could near $200 billion.

BP will survive the worst oil spill in U.S. history for several key reasons:

▶ BP CEO Bob Dudley

It has little debt; its global businesses are forecast to generate $26 billion next year in cash flow from operations; the environmental impact of the spill isn't as bad as feared; and the U.S. government seems unlikely to ban BP from Gulf drilling.

The AP analysis shows

the company is likely to face $38 billion to $60 billion in spill-related costs. A settlement with the federal government could reduce that amount, while a successful class-action lawsuit could add billions more.

BP may be able to spread the spill's costs around. Minority partners Anadarko Petroleum Corp. and MOEX 2007 LLC own 35 per cent of the operation, and rig owner Transocean Ltd. also may be asked to pay. FBR analyst Robert MacKenzie expects BP to get as much as $2 billion from Transocean and as much as $4 billion from Anadarko.

Canadians expected to tighten their belts

Canadians are likely to find themselves less inclined to part with their money in 2011 as consumer confidence remains subdued at the close of 2010, according to economists.

Bank of Montreal economist Robert Kavic expects lower spending by consumers, especially in the housing sector, even though interest rates are expected to remain stable.

Canadian consumer confidence is ending the year on a subdued note, despite an upswing early in 2010, according to a Harris/Decima phone survey that measured confidence at 82.8 in November, little changed from a third-quarter reading. The poll found that Quebec and the Prairies were the most confident.

British Columbia was the least confident.

Ontario saw a large decline in consumer confidence, with 81.5 in the final quarter, down from 86.5 at the beginning of the year.

RESOLUTIONS THAT PASS THE SMELL TEST

He says ...

JOHN MAZEROLLE

So, I was planning to write about how New Year's resolutions are stupid. But then — like so many doubters before me — I noticed that my dirty dishes were stuck together.

I tried to lift a cup in my sink and several pieces came up in one clump, not unlike Crunch n' Munch. That's when my little shoulder angel guy — he's a bachelor like me — appeared and said, "Dude, you need some resolutions."

And it's true. Since my divorce a couple of years ago, I've been repeating my life up to that point: first as a snivelling child, then as a randy teenager, and now I'm back to my early 20s, where Pop Tarts are breakfast and pants are optional. I'm a bachelor through and through — not in the "most eligible," wearing-a-sport-coat kind of way, but in the "most irresponsible," wearing-jogging-pants kind of way.

With that in mind, I will embrace the following resolutions, so by 2012 I will be a better man — an adult one, hopefully.

John's 2011 resolutions:

When the smell makes it so I must choose between washing the dishes and Febrezing the area around the sink, I will do the dishes. Or at least throw them out.

I resolve to never again use the can-I-wear-it smell test.

"That's when my little shoulder angel guy — he's a bachelor like me — appeared and said, 'Dude, you need some resolutions.'"

I further resolve that, if I am forced to use the smell test, I will not keep smelling the article of the clothing until I find a spot fresh enough to justify wearing it.

I resolve to reflect upon why so many of my problems involve smelling things.

I resolve to never again make too-small underwear fit comfortably by cutting through the bands around the leg holes.

When I kill an insect that has crawled out of the loveseat, I will look to see if there are others, rather than assuming that a toothpick with its thorax on it will serve as a warning to the other insects to stay where they are.

I will use that square-ish thing in the kitchen — not the thing that keeps the beer cold and the cheese crusty, but the other thing, with the four circles of pain on top.

I resolve to continue using the steam from the shower to iron my clothes instead of buying an iron, because that just makes sense.

I pledge to do all these things. Or at the very least, cover the smell with Pledge.

THE CYCLE OF POVERTY:

MICHAEL DE ADDER

Going back to their roots

Worth mentioning

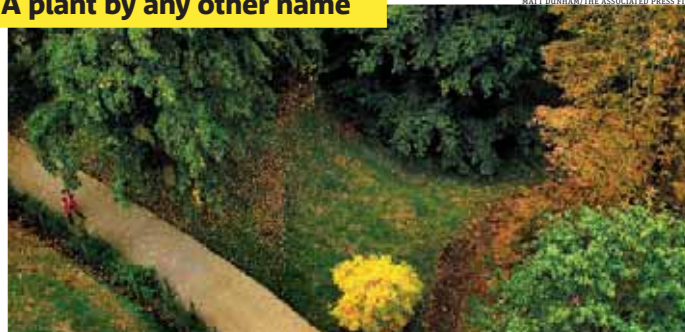

British and U.S. scientists say they have compiled the most comprehensive list of land plant species ever published — a 300,000-species strong compendium they hope will boost conservation, trade and medicine.

The list, drawn up by researchers at Kew Gardens in London and the Missouri Botanical Garden in St. Louis, is intended to help resolve one of botany's most basic problems: Figuring out which plants go by what name.

Some plants have been labelled differently by researchers operating in different countries over the past century, while in other cases the different variants of the same plant have been erroneously identified as belonging to different species. There are also cases in which plants names' have been applied mistakenly, or just misspelled.

A plant by any other name

MATT DUNHAM/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

Although a rose by any other name may still smell as sweet, scientists say that attaching different labels to the same plant can rob researchers of the chance to get the information they need.

"If you only know it by one of its many names you only get part of the story," said Eimear Nic Lughadha, the senior scientist at Kew responsible for the list.

10 overlooked films

► Don't miss these hidden gems that may have escaped you first time round

SCENE@METRONews.CA

According to movie web.com, 648 movies were released in theatres in 2010. At an average of an hour-and-a-half each that's 972 hours of film. Viewed continuously it would take almost 41 complete days to see them all.

Here are some of 2010's releases you may have missed but are worth a look.

Splice

In Splice a creature goes from newborn to troubled teen in just a matter of weeks. Starring Sarah Polley and Adrien Brody, it's a giddy good fun; the rare sci-fi flick that revels in its b-movie roots while also offering up something to think about.

Harry Brown

Michael Caine has rarely been better than he is in Harry Brown, a gritty Teabag Western about an old man in the Elephant and Castle section of London who strikes back after a gang kills his best mate.

► Michael Cera stars in Scott Pilgrim vs. The World.

Scott Pilgrim vs. The World

Scott Pilgrim vs. The World stars Michael Cera as a 22-year-old Torontonians who must defeat his girlfriend's Seven Evil Exes if he wants to be with her. It's a wild ride that nails the pop culture zeitgeist but also tells a universal human story.

Cyrus

Cyrus is an odd movie. It's about a lonely guy, the woman of his dreams ... and her quirky son played by Jonah Hill. Not quite a comedy, not quite a drama, it falls somewhere in between. Just like real life.

Get Low

Get Low, the unlikely story of a man arranging his own funeral, took on three hankie status as Robert Duvall played an old man looking back on his wasted life.

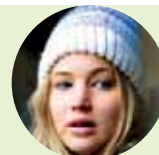

Flipped

Rob Reiner's Flipped is coming-of-age Rashômon filtered through Leave It to Beaver with a dash of The Wonder Years thrown in for good measure. In other words, it's a touching, but idiosyncratic film about growing up.

The Disappearance of Alice Creed

The kidnapping drama The Disappearance of Alice Creed features three characters, three, maybe four sets and one hundred minutes of unrelenting tension. It's a nasty little piece of work, remorselessly bleak but carefully crafted enough to be intriguing.

Winter's Bone

Winter's Bone should be seen not only for its uncompromising story of an Ozark girl who will do anything to keep her family together, but also for the breakout performance of its star Jennifer Lawrence.

Defendor

In Defendor Woody Harrelson plays a man whose rich inner life spills out into his real life. By day he's dead-end-job-Arthur but at night he's superhero Defendor. Gritty and funny, Harrelson breathes life into a role that could easily have fallen into cliché.

Marwencol

Marwencol, a documentary about a man with a severe brain injury who creates his own world as therapy is one of the funniest, most touching and inspirational films of the year.

Scene in brief

John Leguizamo is readying the latest installment of his life for a Broadway run.

The 46-year-old comedian-actor will bring a new one-man autobiographical show, Ghetto Klown, to the Lyceum Theater beginning Feb. 21. The show officially opens March 22 and runs 12 weeks.

Ghetto Klown will delve into the early days of Leguizamo's acting career and his roles in Hollywood. It will follow in the tradition of his shows Spic-O-Rama, Freak and Sexaholic.

The new one, to be fine-tuned in Chicago in February, will be directed by Fisher Stevens.

Leguizamo won an Emmy for his monologue Freak, which originally appeared on Broadway in 1998.

He was nominated for a Golden Globe Award for his supporting role in 1995's To Wong Foo Thanks for Everything, Julie Newmar.

New Year's Eve can be one of the most difficult nights to plan for. With so many options — and expectations for a great experience — it can leave some feeling burdened.

After more than a quarter-century of experience, Citytv's got New Year's Eve down to a science.

Throw together an all-star cast of entertainers, television hosts, and dazzling effects for a live-to-air broadcast to entertain those not interested in braving the potential chill of New Year's Eve weather. Those who want to be part of the action can check out Nathan Phillips Square to see the whole thing live.

Starting at 10 p.m. on Friday, the 26th annual Citytv New Year's Eve Bash is slated to be one of the evening's hottest affair.

"The opportunity to play something like this where you get to share an experience with the whole country at once? Money can't buy that," says Stereos vocalist Pat Kordyback.

The pop/rock quintet, which just released their second album Uncontrollable, is among the musical acts performing at the bash.

"To be asked to be a part of this national event is huge for us. ... What a great way to start a new year," Kordyback says.

Singer Danny Fernandes says this will be his second time participating in the event, and he plans to hit the stage and kick-start 2011 in style. "I got to bring in 2009 this way," he says. "The audience showed me so much love, it was amazing; a great feeling. Now that I'm a bit more established, I'm already getting a rush for it."

It's a boy for John & Furnish

Sir Elton John is holding close a new tiny dancer.

The piano man and husband David Furnish have become parents to a seven-pound, 15-ounce baby boy born on Christmas Day.

The news was first reported Monday night by USMagazine.com and confirmed to The Associated Press by John's Los Angeles-based publicist.

Zachary Jackson Levon Furnish-John was born in California via a surrogate, whose identity is being protected by the new parents.

Zachary is 62-year-old John's first child with the 48-year-old Furnish. The couple married in 2005.

In a joint statement, the new parents told USMagazine.com that "Zachary is healthy and doing well" and they are "overwhelmed with happiness and joy at this very special moment."

Canadian filmmakers ready for a big 2011

It's shaping up to be a busy 2011 for some of Canada's hottest filmmakers. From futuristic sci-fi to psychological drama to a magical chronicle of India's burgeoning independence, homegrown directors are tackling a broad slate of themes and genres. A look at some of the upcoming projects from the country's biggest stars:

David Cronenberg: Canada's twisted master at psychological tension is reportedly in the midst of post-production on the Sigmund Freud film, A Dangerous Method. Already, it looks set to become a controversial release — reports suggest it features sado-masochistic sex scenes.

Jason Reitman: There's a

pattern developing here. Reitman re-teams with Juno scribe Diablo Cody several years after their winning combination on the quirky teen pregnancy hit for the mid-life crisis film, Young Adult.

Neill Blomkamp: OK, so he's actually South African, but the special effects wizard behind District 9 is based in Vancouver and has been here since his late teens. Blomkamp says he's spending much of the coming year working on another other-worldly followup, Elysium. The feature is said to be set in the far future on another planet but Blomkamp is keeping details tightly under wraps.

Sarah Polley: She earned an Oscar-nomination for her first script, Away From Her, and now Polley has turned to another of her own screenplays for her second feature, Take This Waltz. Last summer, Polley said the romantic drama focuses on a married couple played by Michelle Williams and Seth Rogen.

Witherspoon gets engaged

Reese Witherspoon is engaged to Hollywood agent Jim Toth.

A representative for the actress confirmed that the couple will wed and says they're "extremely happy." The engagement was first reported by Us Weekly.

The 34-year-old actress was previously married to actor Ryan Phillippe. She has two children with him and they divorced in 2008. Toth is an agent for Creative Artists Agency. Witherspoon is a CAA client but is represented by another agent.

365 days of style

Remembering the highs and lows of 2010 in one big year-end extravaganza

Up and down

Lady Gaga

In the history of Metro's fashion polls, she's the only artist to top both the worst and best-dressed lists. Whether she was walking the red carpet in a dress made of meat, ripping off Madonna's entire Blonde Ambition wardrobe, or showing up to a Yankees game in a bra and panties, someone in the world was either really, really pissed off or really, really happy about it.

Blake Lively

In the eyes of fashion editors, the Gossip Girl star could do no wrong. She not only appeared on the cover of American Vogue two times this year, she's also rumoured to be the next face of Chanel.

Tom Ford

After a six-year hiatus from women's wear, Tom Ford returned in September with a top secret runway show that featured A-listers modeling his covetous sequin dresses.

Miley Cyrus and Taylor Momsen

Representing for oversexed teens everywhere, Disney star Cyrus spent the countdown to her 18th birthday progressively wearing less and less. Her style of choice? Trailer park chic. Meanwhile, 17-year-old Taylor Momsen opted for the equally cringe-worthy Playboy-Bunny-turns-goth look. METRO

Minimalism mania

Phoebe Philo started the trend in 2009 with her modern, tailored debut at Céline. And then the rest of the fashion world followed in 2010. From the Paris runways to Zara, nearly everyone was churning out their own versions of razor sharp jackets and A-line leather skirts.

American Apparel

Addled with major debt and a stream of lawsuits, Dov Charney's empire seemed like it was constantly on the verge of folding. AA has expanded its offerings of leggings to include leisure pants.

Jersey Shore

Bar brawls aside, the self-proclaimed "guidos and guidettes" are most guilty of glorifying airbrushed jeans, Sopranos shirts, Cesar haircuts and bad spray tans.

Fashion democracy

In 2010, the painfully exclusive fashion weeks suddenly became accessible to all. Fashion houses streamed their runway shows while editors reported every detail in real-time Twitter updates.

68 Main Street with a model suite that feels both warm and vibrant.

Designer Flora Di Menna created a refreshingly inviting space by focusing on soft, earthy tones with rich depth that enhance the effect of light throughout the suite.

"The palette is fresh and light filled. Creams and pale camels are infused with warmth and contrast through the mid-tone woods — the kitchen cabinets, the round walnut dining table — and the subtle patterns of the carpets, window treatments, and pillows.

Menna said.

In the main area of living, dining and kitchen, Di Menna kept to a minimal furniture plan with a sofa, chair and coffee table in more tailored lines and less bulky, shallower consoles tucked into niches at the perimeter or against a wall to keep them out of the way.

To save space, Menna gave the granite counter on the kitchen island just enough overhang to accommodate two upholstered stools.

Hardwood flooring in the common areas creates contrast but in the bedrooms Di Menna went with a high-quality broadloom carpet to both expand the space and allow the floor to feel soft and comforting to walk on.

To make efficient use of space in the master bedroom, Di Menna deftly added storage without adding undue bulk by choosing sleek, space-conscious furniture.

"Although the master has a walk-in closet, I've added three dressers. Having such a slim low profile, with barely-there hardware, they don't intrude into the space at all and in fact complement it by adding a dark contrast to an otherwise creamy palette," Di Menna said.

The big colour for 2010: Pink?

DECOR MOMENT

KARL LOHNES
HOME@
METRONEWS.CA

Each new year introduces new decor trends, and one of the biggest this upcoming year is the bold and optimistic colour of pink.

The Pantone Colour Institute recently named honeysuckle the colour for 2011.

Not since the late 1950s have we seen this colour used as a decorating staple.

Keeping in mind that women did most of the home decorating in the '50s, I'm wondering whether the male population will be accepting of this new, bold colour.

Using the hue sparingly is the key to introducing this year's biggest colour into your space.

A shot of pink will add an upbeat feeling to almost any deep neutral tones — especially charcoal and dark brown.

Excited about pink but don't want your space to look like a teenage girl's bedroom? Here are a few decorating suggestions to incorporate it without going overboard.

ACCESSORIZE IT PINK

Decorative accessories like glass vases, leather ottomans and area rugs are a great way to add the colour to a room without overbearing it.

Remember the rule with accessories: three items of pink in any room will add enough impact. Any more will be overkill.

To keep a masculine look, make sure the amount of pink in a patterned rug or pillow is less than 30 per cent.

The Delizia Rug from Crate and Barrel adds just enough pink to stay on trend and keeps the guys happy.

PAINT IT PINK

A full wall of pink might be overpowering, so I suggest using it on a wall where large items will be sitting against it, breaking up the expanse of colour.

A back wall in the dining room with a large hutch sitting in front is a great example.

Also, consider painting a wall that isn't being viewed within a seating arrangement.

Benjamin Moore's Rosy Blush 2083-30 is my choice for a delicious pink wall.

Also, painting an old piece of furniture bright pink will add an instant focal point to any space.

COOK IT PINK

Check out Bodum's electric kettles and toasters in great bright colours.

Their thermal jug brings a touch of pink into any room you carry your coffee.

FABRICS

Printed bedding, towels and upholstery fabric are most likely the easiest way to introduce pink to a room.

Look for it with other colours like dark khaki green, orange, grey or chocolate brown. Those colours will help sway the pink into a masculine tone.

Remember to make sure the trend colour is less than 30 per cent of the overall pattern. Ikea's Andrea Satin duvet and pillows remind me of the colours in a swanky tie. Team with chocolate brown sheets and you've come on trend with this year's biggest colour.

Creamy Tortellini

Ingredients:

- 3 cups refrigerated cheese tortellini
- 2 tsp minced garlic
- 2 tbsp vegetable oil
- 1 envelope vegetable soup mix
- 2 cups half-and-half cream
- 1/4 cup minced fresh parsley
- 1/4 cup shredded part-skim mozzarella cheese
- 1/4 tsp pepper

Crosby and Co. year's top team

▶ Canadian men's Olympic squad a clear pick as the best of 2010

Thirteen days of anxiety and expectation exploded in a coast-to-coast roar of joy as Sidney Crosby scored in overtime to give Canada the medal it wanted most at the 2010 Winter Olympics — the men's hockey gold.

That moment in Vancouver and the victory in the sport on which so much Canadian pride rests has led the men's Olympic hockey squad to be named the team of the year in an annual survey of the country's newsrooms by The Canadian Press.

It came on the final day in Vancouver as a flood of medals went to the host country. The men's hockey medal was Canada's 14th gold of the Games, a record for a country at a single Winter Olympics.

"The pressure of the world and the entire country was on us to go out and not disappoint." Team Canada centre Jonathan Toews said in an interview. "To beat some pretty good teams on the way to the gold medal was amazing. Everyone's trying to knock you off and the pressure's all on you, so for us to find a way to win was amazing."

Peak television ratings had more than 80 per cent of Canadians watching as their team pulled out a 3-2 victory in the final against an opportunistic American squad that had chilled a country's heart with an upset 5-3 win in the preliminary round.

With Canada leading 2-1 in the gold-medal game, U.S. coach Ron Wilson pulled goaltender Ryan Miller for an extra attacker and Zach Parise scored to force overtime with 25 seconds left in regulation time.

After Canada survived a close call in the extra period, Crosby barrelled into the American zone and put the puck into the left corner, then shouted "Iggy!" as he broke toward Miller and fired Jarome Iginla's pass into the net.

Crosby threw his stick and gloves in the air in triumph before he was mobbed on the ice by his teammates, while red-and-white clad fans leapt and hugged each other after a goal that became a classic. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Leafs send Kadri back to the Marlies

The Maple Leafs sent rookie forward Nazem Kadri back down to the Toronto Marlies of the American Hockey League yesterday.

ADAM PROTEAU

THE HOCKEY NEWS

DRAFT MAY BE LEAFS' ONLY HOPE

The other night, on my Twitter feed (twitter.com/proteautype), I said: (a) the Maple Leafs got stuck in a wintry hell for five hours after their Boxing Day game in New Jersey (stranded on a freeway, thanks to the East Coast snowstorm); and (b) their fans have been stuck in a wintry hell since Toronto last played a playoff game more than six years ago.

In truth, the agony of Leafs fans dates back to the year that's never mentioned anymore around the team's headquarters: 1967. (Google "Leafs" and "67" for a full explanation.) That's why there's deep, ongoing angst over the Phil Kessel trade, why Nazem Kadri's every muscle twinge is overanalyzed and why customers at the Air Canada Centre have resorted to throwing breakfast foods on the ice.

In short, people have lost it, big time, in Toronto. And I'm afraid the only way they will be cured of their anguish is by the Leafs rebuilding through the draft.

I know Brian Burke doesn't agree with this, both by his actions since becoming Leafs GM a couple of years ago and by the many loud pronouncements he's made in playing down the benefits of a draft-first philosophy.

As Burke has noted, the Penguins landed superstar Sidney Crosby because a ping-pong ball fell Pittsburgh's way during the draft lottery — and depending on ping-pong balls isn't the way to build a team. That said, there is no denying that the higher you select in any given draft year, the better chance you have of selecting a player to build a franchise around.

One thing is increasingly clear in the salary-capped NHL: Teams don't willingly part with the services of franchise players; rather, they re-sign them.

(Sure, the Bruins allowed Kessel to walk away, and the Calgary Flames gave up on Dion Phaneuf, but neither has established himself as on par with Crosby or Nicklas Lidstrom.)

Burke may have some more tricks up his sleeves, but I don't see how he lands that franchise player unless he concedes failure with his current plan and turns to the draft process he claims to distrust.

Favre photo flap ends with fine

Brett Favre has been fined $50,000 US by the NFL for a "failure to co-operate" with its investigation into inappropriate messages and lewd photos he allegedly sent to former Jets employee Jenn Sterger, a decision her lawyer called extremely disappointing.

The league said yesterday that commissioner Roger Goodell "could not conclude" that Favre violated the league's personal conduct policy based on the evidence currently available to him.

"The forensic analysis could not establish that Favre sent the objectionable photographs to Sterger," the statement said. "The review found no evidence to contradict the statements of both Favre and Sterger that they never met in person, nor was there anything to suggest that Sterger engaged in any inappropriate conduct."

The decision comes a couple weeks after Favre's NFL record for consecutive starts was snapped at 297 and ahead of the season finale for the 41-year-old Minnesota Vikings quarterback, who will play what may be his last game — if he's healthy enough.

The NFL said its sole focus was on whether Favre violated workplace conduct policy, not to "make judgments about the appropriateness of personal relationships."

Favre's fine will help fund a new training program on workplace conduct around the NFL.

Video evidence

The allegations against the three-time MVP surfaced on the website Deadspin.

The popular sports blog posted a video on Oct. 7 that included text messages and voice mails allegedly left by Favre for Sterger in 2008, when they both worked for the Jets, including one in which he invites her to his hotel.

The video ends with several below-the-belt photos — said to be of Favre — which were allegedly sent to Sterger.

Goodell said in a memo sent to clubs, though for the multimillionaire QB the penalty is a pittance. While sitting out Tuesday's game at Philadelphia because of post-concussion symptoms, Favre essentially earned $50,000 over about five minutes of action.

"It clearly shows that an NFL star player was given preferential treatment and tells all other players that failure to co-operate may cost you some money but will not result in other punishment," said Sterger lawyer Joseph Conway, who added there was "ample evidence" the photos were of Favre.

"Additionally, today's decision is an affront to all females and shows once again that, despite tough talk, the NFL remains the good old boys' league."

Arsenal still looking up at league leaders

Arsenal drew 2-2 at 10-man Wigan to miss a chance to draw level with joint Premier League leaders Manchester United and Manchester City, while Chelsea ended a run of six matches without a win by grinding out a 1-0 victory against Bolton yesterday. France defender Sebastien Squillaci scored an own goal in the 81st minute to deny Arsenal all three points at DW Stadium. Ben Watson had put Wigan ahead before the Gunners rallied through goals by Andrey Arshavin and Nicklas Bendtner. Liverpool was upset 1-0 at home to lowly Wolverhampton in the other match.

UFC

Liddell done with fighting

Chuck (The Iceman) Liddell helped build the UFC. Now he's going to help run it.

The UFC Hall of Famer and former light-heavyweight champion announced his retirement yesterday to become the mixed martial arts organization's executive vice-president for business development.

The 41-year-old Liddell, better known for beatdowns than business, acknowledged it was a title he never expected to precede his name.

"Definitely not, but if I'm going to be a vice-president of something, have a real job, this is the one I want," Liddell said.

Liddell (21-8) talked of retirement in April 2009 after a string of poor performances culminated in a TKO loss to Mauricio (Shogun) Rua at UFC 97 in Montreal. UFC president Dana White, who once managed Liddell, was more definitive before and after the Rua fight, saying it was time for his friend to quit before he got hurt.

But Liddell missed the sport and — after rededicating himself to training — returned to the cage in June at UFC 115 in Vancouver, where he was knocked out by Rich Franklin.

That loss was his third straight and fifth in his last six outings.

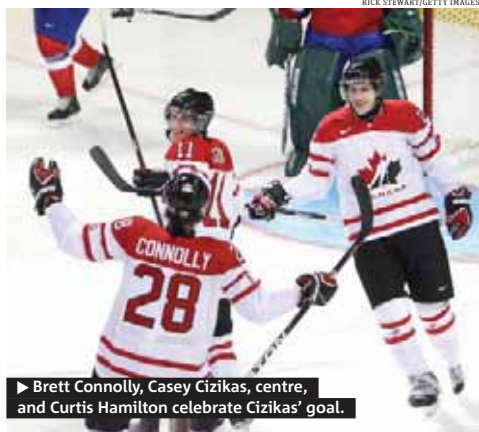

"Listen, I can't even imagine what it's like to walk out into an arena with 20,000 people screaming your name and all the things that go along with it — and the money and the fun and the fame," said White.

"The reality is he was the king, man. And it's tough to walk away from that."

Suspensions

► Canada's Zack Kassian and two Slovakian players were slapped with suspensions yesterday for hits to the head after a night of ugly incidents at the world junior hockey championship.

► Kassian was handed a second game on top of the automatic one-game suspension he got for taking a match penalty for a check to the head of defenceman Petr Senkerik on Tuesday night.

round heading into what may be a decisive match for first place in its group on Friday against Sweden (2-0), who play the Czech Republic today.

Canada was reduced to 16 skaters as Zack Kassian served the first of a two-game suspension for a hit to the head during a 7-2 win Tuesday over the Czech Republic and defenceman Calvin de Haan and forward Jaden Schwartz sat out with lower body injuries. Forward Cody Eakin also sat out with a suspected hand or wrist injury.

Hey Suzy is been non stop craziness since I meet you but I can't picture my life without you now... Dont mind anybody else... LOVE YOU JEFF

Maya, I am sorry if I have hurt you in any way before. I want you back. I want your love back. I promise to make the days to come better, and will prove yesterday's Taurus horoscope right, that your going to have a whole new world and new opportunities that are going to open up. I love you... I really do. ALI

Dear T,
It's great to have you and your abs back in Toronto. Here's to an amazing trip! I love you K

Today's horoscope

♈ Aries March 21-April 20 Now that Mercury, planet of the mind, is moving in your favor again you should go back and review some of the opinions you have been so vocal in defending these past few weeks.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21 You will find it easier to come to grips with a financial or business matter that has been keeping you awake at night.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 Life is not a zero sum game; others don't have to lose every time you and your allies win. Mercury, your ruler, will make it easy for you to find ways to build bridges and move forward together.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22

Choose an approach and stick with it. You have chopped and changed so many times in recent weeks that you may no longer be sure if you are facing in the right direction.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 23 You need to decide what it is you are aiming for in life. Give yourself time and space to think about the options and go with the one that means most to you personally.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24-Sept. 22 You may be asked to give up something that means a lot to you today — and you should do so willingly. The sacrifices you make for others now will be repaid in full later on.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 Keep your eyes and ears open over the next 24 hours, because if you don't pay attention to what's going on around you a wonderful opportunity could go begging.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 It is of the utmost importance that you stay positive today, even if you receive news that is less than pleasing. Most likely what you hear is not bad at all.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 It's not like you to lack confidence but over the past few weeks, while Mercury has been moving retrograde, you seem to have lost your way a bit. Don't worry, you'll be back on track in no time.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20

What happens today will remind you how easy it is to get worked up about things that are of no importance. No doubt you will kick yourself for being so silly but no great harm has been done.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 Your ability to trust has been damaged because someone you are close to emotionally let you down in some way. But it's no big deal.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 As mind planet Mercury turns direct in the career area of your chart you will remember what it was you were hoping to accomplish. Yes, you have wasted time, but you'll make up for it.
